Dear Mr. Dulles:

The Foreign Service Institute will present a new course, seven weeks full time, - U. S. Diplomacy and International Organization - beginning January 6, 1958.

The Foreign Service Institute offers you the opportunity to nominate up to two officers from your organization to participate in this course.

The course, now being given for the first time, aims to meet the growing need in the Foreign Service, the Department of State and other Government agencies concerned with U. S. foreign policy for an increased knowledge of the United Nations, of regional organization throughout the world, and of techniques for dealing with these multilateral organizations. The course takes into account the fact that the U. S. Government must act through different agencies and deal with a variety of international organizations in the conduct of many aspects of its foreign relations.

While the enrollment in the course will consist primarily of officers of the Foreign Service and of the Department of State, the Foreign Service Institute feels that this course should be of special value to other Government agencies because of their increasing interest in international organizations and in the formulation and implementation of U. S. policy toward and through them.

Should you be interested in nominating two officers to participate in this course, I would appreciate it if you would furnish the Registrar of the Institute with the name and rank of your designees and a brief summary of their educational background and experience with your organization prior to December 1, 1957. For full participation in the course, nominees should be cleared for secret information. I enclose six copies of the announcement of the course.

Sincerely yours,

/s/
